A MENACE.

There are about 31,000 children of school age in Richmond. Excluding the colleges, there are about 25,000 pupils attending the public, private and parochial schools of the city. Nearly 6,000 children of school age are not in school. Of those who are enrolled about 90 per cent attend. Many of these attend only a few weeks in the year. Illiteracy is one of the greatest menaces to progress and development of the people. What is Richmond going to do to lessen it?

LOCAL OPTION MASS-MEETING.

In The Times-Dispatch this morning there appears a call for a public meeting to be held Thursday evening at the Academy of Music. The meeting, which is being arranged by representative men of the city, is in the interest of the maintenance in full force of our present local option laws as applied to the liquor business and to protest against the substitution for them of State-wide prohibition.

The character of the people who have signed this call, representing the best in the citizenship of Richmond, necessarily gives it great weight. The list is of the kind that commands attention.

Now that the issue is joined it should be discussed on both sides as becomes its gravity and should be free of intemperate personal allusions.

FESTIVAL SUCCESS.

Essential to the welfare of a community as is its material advancement, no community can become a rounded and perfected part of the eternal whole that relies entirely upon the practical and the common-place. In order to fulfill thoroughly its mission to its citizens and to itself, it must manifest an appreciation of things that lie beyond the domain of finance and manufacture, even of science and of civic duty. Therefore, The Times-Dispatch welcomes the knowledge that the most potent factor in the development of music and the love of music in this community—the Wednesday Club—has striven toward, and has attained, a point higher than it has ever reached before, and that, in its effort, it has been supported by the warm co-operation of an appreciative public.

The indicated financial success of the music festival this season is a matter for congratulation, because the fact that such success is possible points to a growing spirit that must eventually bring the city and its people to a plane upon which all things good are possible.

PEOPLE AND COMMISSION.

Senator La Follette, who is one of the most excitable spots on the political map, fears that public sentiment is striving to bull-whip the Interstate Commerce Commission with regard to the Eastern rate cases. This is the same La Follette who, a few years ago at a Philadelphia banquet, saw visions of a magazine and newspaper conspiracy against the public good and was promptly called down by Don C. Seitz, of the New York World.

The Senator is quite in the right when he reproves one or two of the more impudent railroads for circulating anonymous literature. He is not right when he intimates the public has been fooled or that any respectable element of newspapers has been subsidized.

The subsidy talk is undiluted rot. There are a few railroad organs in this country. But they could split their throats and then not make one-hundredth the noise rising for a decision of some nature from the commission.

The truth is, the people know the inaction of the commission is a menace to business. The cry for a verdict comes from them more powerfully than from the carriers. If the commission is wise in its day and generation, it will lose no further time in returning an answer of one kind or the other.

JUST HAMS.

Our cherished contemporary, the Atlanta Constitution, breaks forth into song over the glories of hams produced in the enterprising County of "Brooks" in that State.

We are told that so ravenous is the populace for Brooks County hams that huge shipments of them are sent to British Columbia, while from various American States the demand is hopelessly in advance of the supply. We note also with pleasure the statement that it is now in the power of Brooks, as well as of every other county in Georgia, to gain for their pork products the reputation that attaches to the Smithfield hams of the Old Dominion.

Wayside Chats With Old Virginia Editors

We have a new brother "in our midst." His birth is announced in the Vol. I, No. 1, of the Danville Ledger-Dispatch, which first saw the light Thursday, May 7, 1914. And a very attractive youngster it is. The Ledger-Dispatch is a weekly, though with its first cry it announces the fact that its lines are strong and that expectations of rapid development are daily and confidently entertained. "Time will tell in this matter." It concludes its salutatory, "At any rate, every effort will be made to strengthen this paper from within, so that it will be able to develop upon such lines that will add both prestige and publicity to Danville." A worthy ambition. Welcome into the fold, little brother!

Commenting upon the surprise expressed in this column that its readers should be the almost unheard-of thing of praising the home paper, the Householder-Advertiser, the lucky newspaper in question, remarks: "Several more letters of praise have been received since last week, which cause us to assert, as we have many times, that Fairfax people are the best on earth." Either they are or the Householder-Advertiser is an exceptionally good newspaper. Our opinion is that the phenomenon is due partly to the character of the people and partly to the excellence of the paper.

"No man is interesting until he is thirty-five," declares a wise young girl in her bridal interview. We plead guilty to the soft impeachment of having reached the age of thirty-five. The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot. There is no merit in a partial confession.

Arguing against too frequent change in schools, the Times-Dispatch makes the point that "the men and women who made this country great learned reading, writing and arithmetic out of the plain books that were had at the time, and at that time." They also lived in log cabins, some of them; but they were not great because of it. They also managed to live and grow great without telephones and telegraphy. They also rode in stage coaches instead of on limited trains. They were not great because of these things or because they were satisfied with them. They were great because they were dissatisfied with them.

EXCHANGING DEMAGOGY.

More than surface significance attaches to the recent revival in the Senate of the somewhat attenuated controversy over "tainted money." It does not matter so much that a few Senators object to the government using Rockefeller's money to stamp out the boll weevil or to promote farm demonstration. The truly discouraging feature is that they should still be willing to indulge in the buncombe of a past day by clumsy misinterpretation of public intelligence.

Senator Martin, of Virginia, exploded the whole "tainted money" farce when he said he was willing to see half of Rockefeller's fortune spent in developing this State. There were laws, he said, to punish the creator of this fortune. And he intimated, the most effectual cleaner of money in need of cleansing was its dedication to righteous sources. The Senator was wholly correct. He might have added that the money, after all, came from the people, and that much of it should be reinvested in the people's cause.

We must expect demagogues as long as humanity is human. We must expect underestimates of the public intelligence. But it certainly is irritating to see that styles in demagoguery undergo so little change that, to use an automobile phrase, the 1900 models are being used in 1914.

We rather guess the average politician is about the most unlearning creature in life. His mental sutures are apt to harden early; his mental wireless stops reporting accurately once success perches on his banner. Having won once by a certain dodge, he falls into the delusion that the charm will work again.

The exceptional politician—we are almost tempted to call him the statesman—never stops growing. He is a kind of refined edition of Burke's "Peter Pan." He considers he always has things to learn; that the fashions of yesterday must be discarded for the modes of to-day. Not only does he "keep his ear to the ground," but, if he is wise, he even tries his hand at anticipating public sentiment. But there are few enough of his stripe in our generation.

Washington is a wonderful place to contract intellectual arteriosclerosis. The "tainted money" slogan is old-fashioned. Dr. Washington Gladden, who invented it, is dead and nearly forgotten. We have found that organized philanthropy takes the amount of dubious fortunes. The politicians who think otherwise ought to consult a new political tailor.

THE CHURCH AND EDUCATION.

"Are the churches neglecting?" queries the Virginia Journal of Education, and, answering the question in the affirmative, proceeds to fault them for failure to devote more time to the specific cause of education.

The point is well-taken. The church militant we all know, and whether we approve it or not depends upon our point of view and upon our theory of the purposes of Christianity. The church political we all know and few approve. The church sociological has its adherents. The church educational, in the secular sense, scarcely exists, and of all is the most important adjunct to the church religious. It is a part of it. Christianity and education are so inextricably woven together that it is extremely difficult for one to exist without the other. It is impossible for either to reach to full development without the support of the other.

It is not desirable that the church should encroach upon the ground which should be cultivated by the school, but it is eminently desirable that the church should do its part toward preaching the value of education to civilization and to Christianity.

Not having heard anything from Coxey's army for some time, the horrible suspicion occurs to us that it has marched south to join Villa's army.

Rain is doubtless a necessity, but baseball fans cannot be made to believe that so much of it is needed.

Old World Gossip

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA, Empress Eugenie and Princess Pauline Metternich are the three who will feel more deeply than any one else in the world the death of Countess Edmundo Montalvo. It is, however, a very private grief, for the Countess, who is now seventy-eight years of age, has been in Paris for many years, and her death will be a private one. She was a French noblewoman, the daughter of a French nobleman, and she was married to a French nobleman. She was a very beautiful woman, and she was a very kind woman. She was a very good woman, and she was a very brave woman. She was a very noble woman, and she was a very great woman. She was a very wise woman, and she was a very strong woman. She was a very brave woman, and she was a very noble woman. She was a very great woman, and she was a very wise woman. She was a very strong woman, and she was a very brave woman. She was a very noble woman, and she was a very great woman. She was a very wise woman, and she was a very strong woman. She was a very brave woman, and she was a very noble woman.
